Washington Letter.

Washington, D. C.—When the making of the tariff law of 1909 shall have become a matter of completed history, it will be found that never before has such a task presented itself to a political party for adjustment, and it will be shown that only a party having in view the best interests of the whole country without regard to section or class could have finally agreed upon any bill whatever. It would have been impossible for the Democratic party to have agreed, or for the Populists or the Socialists—no party, excepting a body made up of men who could sacrifice personal interests and sectional interests for the best good of the whole country. It is a most thorough vindication of Republicanism as embodied in the example of our President and party leader and of our Senators and Representatives in Congress. It has shown us as we could not have known it in any other way, the personal character of Mr. Taft and his methods of carrying out what he believed to be wise and honest results. There was no big stick flourished; there were no threats used; there was no coercion—simply calm and deliberate persuasion until, for the most part, he accomplished his purpose.

At all times in our history the members of all political parties have been more or less divided over the schedules and rates of a tariff law. We are geographically so vast a country, and our interests are so widely diversified that it would seem almost impossible to harmonize and agree on rates applicable to all sections and all interests, and never was this so apparent as at the present. Naturally as production and consumption increases and methods become more varied, as machinery becomes more effective, and as both capital and labor increase in such enormous volumes, as has been the case during the last decade, the various needs and wants of different sections must be very far apart. It is almost to be wondered at that any tariff bill could be agreed upon by these various interests; and by men having such divergent views; and it is to the honor and glory of the Republican party as a whole that it could give the country a law agreed upon by its majority and signed by its President.

It remains, of course, to be seen whether the operation of the law will be successful, whether we shall prosper as we have under preceding tariffs. It remains to be seen whether sufficient revenue will come, both from the duties on imports and the internal revenue. It remains to be seen whether importations will increase to such an extent as to displace domestic productions, and it remains to be seen whether we become a country giving full employment to our wage-earners at the highest wages on the face of the earth, or whether the wages must be reduced and the purchasing power of the people curtailed.

One thing, however, should result from the operation of the new law, and that is if not lower prices, certainly no increase. There is not an item in the bill that will warrant an increase in price by the manufacturer or merchant—not one, and if this is attempted it will be an imposition that should be resented by the people, and not charged to the operation of the law. This has been Mr. Taft's design and this has been the thought in the minds of those, who have agreed with him in the reductions carried by the bill, and should this result obtain without a decrease in the volume of employment, then surely the work of the extra session of 1909 will be of inestimable value to the country and rebound to the credit of the Republican party who promised it and carried out its pledges.

A recent incident in the reconstruction of the Democratic Congressional Committee is very significant as to its bearings upon the election of 1912. This committee is now wholly a Bryan committee—the opponents of Mr. Bryan, notably, the secretary, Representative Clark, of Florida, having been ousted. It leaves no doubt whatever in the minds of the political leaders that Mr. Bryan means to try for another nomination three years hence, and that means, of course, Republican success at the polls should he be successful in the convention, and at the present time it looks as if Mr. Bryan might be successful in gaining the nomination because his opponents are as ever very much divided, and there seems no prospect of them getting together upon any candidate. Of course it gives Mr. Bryan a considerable time into which to work up a new hobby. Whether or not the Republican party has stolen all his clothes he will have to invent a new raiment and put forth some new tenet to gain a hearing in 1912—in the meantime the Republican party at the next session of Congress will undoubtedly put into enactment many new laws that are needed to carry on the principles and policies of the party and in response to recommendations that will be made by President Taft in his first annual message.

Following this legislation and the first year of operation of the new tariff law will come the Congressional elections of 1910 and the Republican leaders are not unmindful of the fact that there are many doubtful districts because of one reason or other, and that an election between two Presidential elections is always fought with doubt. And yet there is the utmost confidence that not only will the present Republican majority be maintained in the next House, but that it will be considerably increased in spite of the fact that the Democratic Congressional Committee has seen fit to announce that it is going to work a year before the usual time.

It is believed that next year the people will again be as prosperous as they were for the ten years preceding the so-called panic of 1907—it is believed that they will vote for prosperity and progress that comes through Republican legislation; it is believed that the operation of the new tariff law will bring employment and such an increase of wages in the aggregate as to make all present difficulties forgotten, and that while some interests may possibly suffer temporarily to some extent, yet the whole good of the whole country will be so great as to make the people satisfied with general conditions.

When the stomach, heart or kidney nerves get weak, then these organs always fail. Don't drug the stomach—nor stimulate the heart or kidneys. That is simply a make-shift. Get a prescription known to Druggist everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. The Restorative is prepared expressly for these weak inside nerves. Strengthen these nerves, build them up with Dr. Shoop's Restorative—tablets or liquid—and see how quickly help will come. Sold by City Drug Store.

The Bolivar Reunion.

The coming Old Soldiers and Old Settlers Reunion to be held in Bolivar Mo., commencing Monday, August 20th, and continuing until Saturday, September 4th, will no doubt be one of the most enjoyable of Missouri Reunions this year. It is planned to make the occasion a date for the home coming of those who have moved away and located in other States. The grounds are ideally located, well watered and it will be a splendid opportunity to meet old friends and spend a week of camp life with old comrades and friends. The programme will be varied sufficiently to please all. Come and bring your family.

Taney County Picnics.

Get out your good clothes and curry your best saddle horse. For the picnic season is upon us. See your best girl and get ready. If it rains we can celebrate the good crops we will have. If it doesn't rain we had just as well eat, drink and be merry for tomorrow we will starve.

On Friday and Saturday, August 13 and 14, there will be a big old settler's picnic and barbecue at Walnut Shade. The committee announces that they will have plenty of good beef. All they ask the visitors to bring is the bread and the trimmings.

The big Hilda picnic comes next and will be held Friday and Saturday, August 20 and 21. Of course there will be a baseball game each day because Hilda is proud of her ball team. There will be all the rest of the usual attractions too. We might put in a word of caution right here. The new gun-toting law goes into effect on the 16th, so you had better leave your guns, knives, knucks, swords and loaded canes at home. If you have got it in for a feller, paste him with a rubber return ball.

The old soldiers and the rest of us guys who were too young to be soldiers will have a big four days Reunion at Kirbyville from August 25 to 28. Thomas Welch Post No. 553 G. A. R. is going to try to make this the biggest Reunion ever held in Taney county. Good speaking, swings, dancing platforms and other amusements are promised for the young folks, and the old boys will enjoy a camp fire each night. And us youngsters will lie around in the shadows and listen to the vets lie in the light of the blaze.
